Dear Sirs: I feel that it is high time to settle this litigation and get on with business. It serves no purpose to keep chipping away at a company that has had such good success at innovations that make the computer easier to us by the average person. Why keep punishing a company that has done such a good job just because other companies didn't have the ability to do the same if they had had the expertise to do the same first. Lets get on with the business of being a country that rewards companies and people for doing things that helps the economy of this free country. Please end this as soon as possible.

Sincerely,
Dorothy Clinesmith
